A SUDOKU for players and style lovers alike. Columns are replaced by radial rays and rows are replaced by circular paths. The magical squares of the original game become clearly marked segments.

On each ray, leading outwards from the center of the board, on each circular path and in each segment, a figure may only appear once. In this game, too, there is only one correct solution to each puzzle.

The default counters are placed on the board with the red figure on top. During play, the counters are placed with the black figure on top in order to easily distinguish them from the default counters. The solved puzzle then appears in a classy, beech and maple wood design. The natural-colored maple counters softly contrast with the reddish beech wooden board and make this game a unique piece of artwork. Warm beech wood encourages everyone to have a closer look at the board and the game's big maple counters are easy to grip.
