It's all about the colors. Columns are replaced by radial rays, rows are replaced by circular paths. The magical squares of the original game become clearly marked segments.

On each ray, leading outwards from the center of the board, on each circular path and in each segment, a color may only appear once. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle.

This SUDOKU is solved with colors only! Each counter has an imprinted figure on one side. The default counters are placed on the board with the figure on top. During play, the counters are brought into play with their figures facing down.

The use of colors makes it wonderfully easy to get a good overview over the still missing positions. The colors are harmonized and fun to play with, creating a small piece of artwork when the puzzle is finally solved.
